The ‘Child sexual abuse prevention – It’s time we talked about it’ campaign

1. Who we are

Stop It Now! Wales is a child sexual abuse prevention project that works across the country to ensure that parents, carers and professionals are as best placed as they can be to protect children from sexual abuse and exploitation.

We believe that child sexual abuse is preventable and that all adults have a role to play in protecting children from sexual harm. This can be best achieved when adults are alert to the signs of child sexual abuse, including the behaviour that someone who might pose a risk to children can display, and knowing where they can seek help and advice.

We work closely with local authorities, LSCBs, police, the Welsh government, the voluntary sector, families and communities.

Stop It Now! Wales is run by the child protection charity The Lucy Faithfull Foundation.

2. What it’s all about

Our campaign – ‘Child sexual abuse prevention – It’s time we talked about it’ – is currently running across Wales.

You may have seen our campaign on social media or heard about it from a colleague.

Along with raising awareness of child sexual abuse, including where the risks lie, it aims to spread awareness that sexual abuse can happen to any child. It aims to make people aware that perpetrators take advantage of the fact that sexual abuse is a taboo subject to abuse children and to silence them. That means that by being aware that sexual abuse can and does happen, everyone in the community can help to keep children safe.

We want to encourage individuals across communities to talk about child sexual abuse in a safe way which is supportive of victims, and to encourage the public to report any concerns they have that a child is at risk.

3. Why your support is invaluable

It is only in recent years that we have come to appreciate the true scale of the sexual abuse of children.

The secrecy surrounding such abuse is evident in the fact that 1 in 3 children who are sexually abused by an adult do not tell anyone. Of those who do tell, most tell a family member or friend. Hardly any come to the attention of police, social services or health professionals.

Key stats

- 1 in 3 children sexually abused by an adult do not tell anyone
- 4 out of 5 children abused by a peer told no one else at the time
- Only 1 in 8 sexually abused children are known to the authorities
- 90% of sexually abused children are abused by someone they know
- Around a third of sexual abuse is committed by other children and young people
- Disabled children are over 3 times more likely to be abused than non-disabled children
- There is no stereotypical abuser - abusers come from all walks of life – and from all socioeconomic backgrounds

Most victims of child sexual abuse don't talk about it and can't ask for help. So adults have to.

By understanding the risks, and knowing what to do if we have a concern – we can prevent abuse from happening in the first place.

Our campaign aims to provide adults with the information we all need to put in place preventative measures, recognise the warning signs of child sexual abuse - and to build the confidence to do something about it.

The scale and secrecy which surrounds child sexual abuse means we all have a part to play in tackling it. And the more support our campaign has, the more people will be informed and protective.

The 'Child sexual abuse prevention – It's time we talked about it' campaign

A new campaign is running across Wales to raise awareness of child sexual abuse – and what we can all do to prevent it.

Run by Stop It Now! Wales, the 'Child sexual abuse prevention – It's time we talked about it' campaign features awareness raising sessions for parents, carers and professionals – along with resources for each. Crucial messages are also being promoted through social media.

It is only in recent years that we have come to appreciate the true scale of the sexual abuse of children. The secrecy surrounding such abuse is evident in the fact that 1 in 3 children who are sexually abused by an adult do not tell anyone. Of those who do tell, most tell a family member or friend. Hardly any come to the attention of police, social services or health professionals. This is why it is so important that we understand the risks, take protective measures and are confident to take action if we need to.

Key stats

- 1 in 3 children sexually abused by an adult do not tell anyone
- 4 out of 5 children abused by a peer told no one else at the time
- Only 1 in 8 sexually abused children are known to the authorities
- 90% of sexually abused children are abused by someone they know
- Around a third of sexual abuse is committed by other children and young people

- Disabled children are over 3 times more likely to be abused than non-disabled children
- There is no stereotypical abuser - abusers come from all walks of life – and from all socioeconomic backgrounds

Most victims of child sexual abuse don't talk about it and can't ask for help. So we, as adults, have to. By understanding the risks, and knowing what to do if we have a concern – we can prevent abuse from happening in the first place.

This campaign aims to provide adults with the information we all need to put in place preventative measures, recognise the warning signs of child sexual abuse - and build the confidence to do something about it.

The scale and secrecy which surrounds child sexual abuse means we all have a part to play in tackling it.
